THE IMPROVEMENT OF BUSINESS

Has Appeared at Last-Change Simultancous in New York and London, The Improving Tendency Likely to Continue-Industrial Situation Full of Hope-The General Outlook.

Special Correspondence of the Intelligencer.

New York, March 23 .- The improvement of business on the stock exchange, which had been foreshadowed in my late weekly advices, has appeared within the past week with a distinctness and force which show that it is real and destined to be permanent. It is needless to here recapitulate the grounds of my forecast; it is sufficient that the change is already here, and with all the evidences of its being the beginning of a true revival.

The change has been simultaneous in New York and London. The latter market has been a free buyer here for the last few days, and its operations indicato fresh confidence and something more than a mere temporary spurt with quick realizings. The bond Syndicate and its operations have evidently had an assuring effect upon foreign investors, and are creating a revival of interest in our securities. Not a few of those who were unable to get from the London subscriptions all the New Fours for which they bid have been induced to take other American issues, which is evidence that the restoration of the Treasury finances has had a distinctly favorable effect abroad upon our credit at large. On the local markot, the change has been unerly speculative. Those who have been holding their mesus ille or on temporary investment come to the conclusion that the depression in securities has touched bottom, and are now beginning to buy raliroad bonds very freely and are taking up the better class of dividend-paying stocks at the current tempting low prices. The speculative condition has correspondingly changed. The late large "short" interest seems to have been covered; the "bears" have ceased their aggressiveness and some of them have betaken themselves to the "bull" side. In brief, the whole situation and tone of the market has changed, the volume of transactions has largely increased, and within the week the general range of prices has risen, and in some cases the advance has been 2@4 per cent.

This improving tendency is evidently destined to continue; and, in the meantime, the best guide to follow in Wall street is the swing of the pendulum. It goes always to the extreme end on each side before it turne. The adjournment of Congress was the signal which I now of congression is sent and congress was the signal which I now of congression is sent and congress was the signal which I now of congression is sent and congress was the signal which I now of congression is sent and congress was the signal which I now of congression. the last few days, and its operations in-dicate fresh confidence and something street is the swing of the pendulum. It goes always to the extreme end on each side before it turns. The adjournment of Congress was the signal which I proclaimed for its reversing its course from the side of disaster to the opposite—that of building up. The recent advance in stocks and the still greater improvement in mercantile business all co to ment in mercantile business all go to ment'n increasing obsises all go to verify the correctness of my diagnosis of the business situation under date of the 5th of March when I proclaimed that "there is a tide in the affairs of men which if taken at the flood leads on to fortune," and that the tide was then about to take upward current. The bituminous coal companies have settled their difficulties; the authracite differences are on the eve of being adjusted; railroad earnings are increasing; the reorganization of broken down railroads is progressing; silver has advanced 4c an ounce; cotton and wheat have gone an ounce; cotton and wheat have gone up materially, which are all factors that contribute to help the stock market and stimulate increased buying for investment account. The Rothschild connection with the United States loan and the success in placing the bonds in Europe, cannot fail to lead the way and stimulate London and continuously layer. stimulate London and continental buy stimulate London and continental buying of American railroad securities which, at present prices, are certainly more tempting than anything offered in other sections of the world.

In estimating the future, it is not to be overlooked that, in some very important respects, this country is now in a materially botter position than it was before the late depression set in. So far as concerns the currency question, upon which so much has depended, that is certainly the case. Two years ago we were in the midst of slarm and apprehension that the nation might be precipitated upon the silver basis. The danger was all the greater because the position and the question were not understood but greatly misunderstood. deration and interpretation were not and deration but greatly misunderstood, and much education of public opinion on the subject was needed. As a nation, our ignorance equalled our alarm. Legislation on the question was undertaken with utter lack of qualitication to deal with it intelligently and Converse. deal with it intelligently, and Congress accomplished virtually nothing towards deal with it intelligently, and Congress accomplished virtually nothing towards a settlement. But all this fear and agitation has been attended with a profound examination into the principles at issue; already public opinion has become intelligent if not fully matured; false principles have been discredited and steps are being taken for bringing public sentiment to a point at which a broad and sound policy may be formulated for the future guidance of political leadors and of the new Congress. In this way, the people are being trained to a standard at which a large majority of them may be trusted to stand firm for a sound system of currency. On this large national question, therefore, we may feel assured that we have passed from a condition of positive danger to one of prespective security.

The tariff question, which two years ago was having a paralyzing effect upon industry, has had its day. It has been settled in a way less calculated to disturb business than was at first feared; turb business than was at Brat leared; the manufacturing interests liave al-ready found ways for adapting their business to the new conditions; and it can hardly be said that the new state of affairs is really, upon the whole, ob-structive to the progress of our indus-trial interests. Thus in the industries there is a vast gain upon the condition of distract, and paralysis that existed distrust and paralysis that existed there is a vast gain upon the condition of distrust and paralysis that existed two years ago.

There are other points at which our industrial position has, in certain important aspects, very meterially important aspects of a world-wide over-production of manufactures. It was the result of the growth of modern improved plant and capacities of production far in excess of any possibilities of consumption, and was at the same time a consequence of an everdoing of trade in the rawer and semi-civilized populations of the world. Our own country directly sympathized with this inflation of trade in other countries and had, at the same time, its own forms of over-supply. Two radical changes must be made before the beginning of recovery could appear. First, there must be a reduction in prices, in order to admit of an enlarged consumption; and next there must be some cartailment of production; while, at some later stage, when these reliefs have been realized, there would be a chance for the development of new consumntive wants. The first

would be a chance for the development

general and large decline in the prices not only of goods, but also of raw materials, most of the latter be-ing now selling at prices un-precedented within the present gen-eration. The reduction of production has been brought about by a painful but natural and inevitable precess. The older plant, below undested to chesh but natural and inevitable process. The older plant, being unadapted to cheapness of production, has had to be retired from use, and must be regarded as in a large measure extinguished, as under the reduced scale of prices it can now be worked only at a loss. In this way, bankrupt competition has been climinated, and the remaining active machinery is of the most approved and economical type, and is qualified to run at a profit upon the lower scale of prices that has been established. This change is of immense value to our industries; for it not only admits of earning profits at lower prices, but also puts us in a at lower prices, but also puts us in a position to compete with other countries in the markets of the world, the effect of this transition being already apparent in many surface indications of the probable opening of new foreign outlets for our manufactures.

The facts above reviewed reveal a situation in our industries full of here situation in our industries full of hope for the future, and afford promise of an early healthy development of the trade of the country. Henry Clews.
